IRS to Require Tax Preparer Identification Numbers

New IRS regulations require all paid tax return preparers to obtain a Preparer Tax Identification Number (PTIN)—even if they already have one—using the IRS online registration system before preparing all or substantially all of any federal tax returns in 2011. The regulations apply to both “signing” and “non-signing” preparers, to include CPAs, attorneys, and CPA firm employees such as interns. CPAs, attorneys, and enrolled agents have been exempted from additional IRS-imposed competency testing and continuing education requirements, and that exemption may be extended to those who prepare returns under the supervision of attorneys, CPAs, or enrolled agents, but these matters had not been resolved as the Board Report went to press. “We are also still working on a start date for testing, and an effective date for the 15 hours of continuing education,” IRS Commissioner Douglas H. Shulman said at the AICPA National Tax Conference held in Washington, DC, on October 26. AICPA has testified that failing to exclude interns from these requirements would be costly to both firms and students and cause both to shy away from tax internships.

In addition, those who anticipate preparing 100 or more federal individual or trust tax returns during the year will be required to use IRS e-file beginning January 1, 2011; those who anticipate preparing between 1 and 99 returns have until January 1, 2012, to comply.

Renewal Notification Made Electronically

In October, individual licensees who have renewed online (about 70% of Board licensees) began receiving a renewal notification letter in the mail and an email notification instead of the complete renewal package. The letter and email direct the licensee to complete the renewal online, where continuing professional education (CPE) hours and other renewal requirements can be submitted and fee payment can be completed by credit card. Once the Board determines that the renewal is complete, the license is issued the next business day. All licensees can follow the progress of the renewal by accessing Online Services for individual licensees on the Board’s website. In particular, licensees can view information showing a license has just been issued or licensees can view information that lists requirements that have not been satisfied. Once a license has been issued, licensees can begin submitting CPE hours to meet requirements for the next license period.

Licensees Reminded of Ethics Requirement; Additional Providers Approved

Licensees are reminded that they must complete a four-hour, Board-approved ethics course every two years as part of their licensing requirements. A list of approved providers with detailed contact information can be found on the Board website, www.tsbpa.state.tx.us, under Licensing. Additional providers have been added recently. Licensees should check the list before enrolling in a course.

Board Develops Video for Prospective Accounting Students

The Board, in cooperation with the National Association of State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA), has developed and produced a 12-minute instructional video for use by colleges and universities in explaining the application process and possible career paths. Dr. Carolyn Conn, CPA, associate professor of accounting at St. Edward’s University, wrote the script for “On the Way to Be a Texas CPA,” with Austin actor Gabriel Luna as narrator. TSBPA Board members Greg Bailes, CPA, presiding officer, A. Carlos Barrera, CPA, Dr. James Flagg, CPA, and Catherine Rodewald had speaking roles, as did TSBPA Executive Director William Treacy, Director of Qualifications Donna Hiller, and General Counsel Jerry Hill. Other Board members and staff, as well as St. Edward’s students and others, also appear on camera. Tom Kenny and Ryan Hirsch of NASBA’s Communications Department, consulted on production, and Hirsch did the filming. The video is the Board’s first effort of this kind, but future videos may be developed to illustrate other procedures.
