UHCC Community Study Enters Second Phase

The University of Houston board of regents approved a $50,000 allotment for funding Phase II of the UH Community Study, a university initiative aimed at revitalizing the UH Central Campus and the surrounding community.

During the first phase, the UH Central Campus Environmental Center, a research arm of the UH School of Architecture commissioned to conduct the study, identified neighborhood problems and offered alternative solutions in overcoming them.

Phase II will include projects to develop more specific proposals to spur revitalization of the area, bounded to the south by South MacGregor Way, to the north by Interstate 45, to the west by Tierwester, and to the east by the Santa Fe railroad tracks.

The key to a successful revitalization plan, according to Professor Larry Bell, director of the center, is commercial and community development that provides goods, services, jobs, places for social interaction, and revenues to support public services.

However, he noted that without a strong market population and a stable community, it is difficult to attract investors

The Sound of Money at KUHF

Friends of KUHF-FM, the public radio station affiliated with the University of Houston System, recently pledged over $45,000 during Jazz: In Concert, the station's second on-the-air fundraising event.

Over 1200 listeners, responding to the concept of diversified funding as a healthy philosophy for public radio, pledged their support to the station. This total represents a 19 percent increase over the October 1980 campaign.

Alex Cochran, KUHF general manager, said, "This recent event was important to us, especially in light of proposed federal budget cuts for public broadcasting stations. Listener support for KUHF will continue to be a vital part of the station's operation.

Funds raised during the drive will be used to purchase station equipment and records and to complete the purchase of remote broadcasting equipment.

Priscilla Khoury, community relations director for KUHF, commented, "We were pleased with the volunteer support from UH students and faculty and the general communi-Local businesses provided food and refreshments during the campaign.

KUHF introduced several new programs including the weekly broadcast of National Public Radio's Star Wars and a special broadcast of highlights from the 1980 Monterey Jazz Festival. Renowned jazz artist Arnett Cobb was also on hand to perform in a live broadcast from KUHF

Academic Computer Approved

The University of Houston board of regents has voted to spend $2.5 million for an academic computer for the UH Central Campus which will eventually serve all four campuses in the UH System.

The board's approval, which came during a meeting on March 2, is the result of a two-year study of the institution's long-term computing needs

William Rowley, executive director of university computing on the UH Central Campus, said that the new equipment should be delivered by September 1, 1981

The new configuration will be a considerable improvement over current resources," Rowley said. The new system is expected to handle academic and research computing needs five to ten times faster than the existing Honeywell 66/60 computer.

Eventually, all instruction and research computing will be handled by the new computer, and all administrative computing needs will shift to the Honeywell unit. The complete shift of computing responsibilities may take up to two to provide those services. By the same token, without the services, it is difficult to attract the type of population that will support commercial development to locate in the area.

Annual maintenance cost of the new system is estimated at $237,700, and annual operational incremental cost, including personnel, is estimated at $282,000.

Recognizing this dilemma, Professor Bell still contends that new development can occur if the university spearheads the initiative; UH students, faculty, and staff represent an immediate market population to support retail establishments typically associated with a "campus town" and other shopping developments.

The preliminary report cited the lack of quality, affordable housing as a major stumbling block to attracting members of the university community to locate near the campus and suggested that the University of Houston provide incentives to promote housing development.

The second phase of the study, therefore, will focus on providing basic services necessary to prompt students and employees to live on or near the campus, as well as ways to make housing available to them, according to Dr. Andrew Rudnick, associate chancellor and head of the Community Study Steering Committee.

Additionally, the steering committee plans to develop a plan to improve the physical image of the university, assist fraternal organizations with planning housing and programs. and explore programs and policies that would improve the UH Central Campus community's morale.

By improving the quality of the environment, the institution hopes to attract good students who might otherwise choose to attend school elsewhere and to enhance the university's ability to recruit quality faculty and staff.

The appointments of deans for two colleges at the University of Houston Central Campus were approved by the UH board of regents on March 2.

Eminent physicist Dr. Edward Teller recently spoke on "The Pursuit of Simplicity" as the American Hoechst Corporation Distinguished Lecturer for 1981 at UHCLC. Dr. Teller, a Senior Research Fellow at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, was one of the first people to be aware of the possibility of the development of an atomic weapon. Since 1975, he has specialized in national energy policy and methods to ensure peace.

The third UHCLC tour of European business firms will be offered for UHCLC students and those who qualify to be students at the Clear Lake campus. The tour is scheduled for the last two weeks in May and includes visits to businesses in the United Kingdom, Germany, Switzerland, and France. Students may earn three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit, or they may participate in the tour on a non-credit basis.

Dr. Susann Dowling, UHCC assistant professor of communication disorders, is president-elect of the National Council of University Supervisors of Practicum in Speech Pathology and Audiology. The council seeks to improve the quality of clinical training for supervisors and serves as a focal point for the dissemination of research and information.

Robert L. Grinaker, UHCC professor of accountancy and taxation, has been appointed to the Marvin Hurley Professorship of Business Administration. He is the first recipient of the recently established professorship, which was endowed in honor of the late Marvin Hurley, executive director of the Houston Chamber of Commerce for 26 years.

Bill Zimmer, coordinator of faculty and student services in the UHCC College of Technology, and his wife Helen were killed in an auto accident on Sunday, February 22, in Brenham, Texas. Zimmer received an MBA from UHCC in 1953 and began working here that year. He served as registrar from 1971-1978 and received the Staff Excellence Award in 1977. The Zimmers are survived by four children and two grandchildren.

Dr. Daniel Jennings, dean of the UHCC Graduate School of Social Work has been appointed vice president of the board of directors of the Chicano Training Center. He is the first and only non-Mexican-American elected to the board. The center, partially funded by a grant from the National Institute of Mental Health, is a research, training, and service delivery organization based in Houston.

Dr. Ansa Ojanlatva of the UHCC College of Education has been asked by Houston's Mayor Jim McConn to serve on the steering committee of the International Year of Disabled Persons, an observance established by the United Nations. The theme in the United States is "the fullest possible participation by disabled persons in their community life."

Mary Schiflett, associate director of the UHCC Center for Health Management, will coordinate the public programs for a two-year study on "Houston, the International City." The National Endowment for the Humanities has granted the Houston Center for the Humanities and Public Policy $173,654 to fund the study on eight ethnic groups in metropolitan Houston: the French, Greeks, Blacks, Jews, Mexican-Americans, Scandinavians, Vietnamese, and Germans. Dr. Joshua Weinstein, UHCC professor in foundations of education, will coordinate the study on the history and culture of the Jews.

Clear Lake Program Wins Accreditation

The graduate program in health services administration at the University of Houston at Clear Lake City has received accreditation from the Accrediting Commission on Education for Health Services Administration, according to Dr. Alfred Neumann, chancellor of UH at Clear Lake City.

The Clear Lake program is now the only accredited health services administration program at a state-supported university in Texas.

Accreditation by the commission means that the Clear Lake program enjoys membership in the Association of University Programs in Health Care Administration. According to Dr. Rosemary Pledger, dean of the UH at Clear Lake City School of Business and Public Administration, one of the most significant advantages to membership is that the required graduate hospital internships are more easily identified for students from accredited programs.

The accreditation follows the completion of a program self-study prepared by Dr. Kelly Moseley, associate professor of health service administration and coordinator of the study. Dr. Moseley was aided by Dr. Joseph Taylor, an assistant professor in the program. In addition, the accrediting commission made a site visit to the Clear Lake campus last November.

The graduate program in health services administration is designed to provide students with basic management skills to perform at entry level positions, and the knowledge and theory necessary to understand and move to governance level positions.

The curriculum is structured to acquaint students with the influences, problems, and constraints which operate at production, coordination, and governance levels of management.

Section 5: Sponsored Activities

Normally, contracts pertaining to sponsored activities are approved by a Chancellor or the designee of the Chancellor. There are instances when sponsored project contracts must be approved by the President—when there is a cost sharing commitment on behalf of the University in excess of $50,000, or when there is a University commitment to construct or renovate a facility at a cost in excess of $50,000.

ROLE OF THE OFFICE OF UNIVERSITY COUNSEL

The Office of University Counsel is to be involved in any contract and agreement negotiations for items set forth in Section 1 of this document.

All contracts and written agreements in Section 1 of this document are to be reviewed and approved as to form by the University Counsel of the University of Houston System prior to submission to the President of the University of Houston System for consideration. All other contracts or written agreements must be reviewed and approved as to form by the Office of University Counsel of the University of Houston System prior to execution.

The Office of University Counsel will recommend to the President disapproval of any contract or agreement if it is not in the best legal interest of the University.
