Coffeehouse guitarist to perform

The UTPB Coffeehouse will come alive once again as the student life office brings a guest performer to campus. The performance, scheduled for 8:30 p.m., Thursday, Oct. 22, will take the audience through a variety of songs and styles.

Arne Brav, a guitar singing entertainer, does a little bit of everything, from blues, ragtime, country, instrumentals, as well as rock and contemporary songs. Along with this, Brav adds a few humorous songs and stories to get the audience going.

Woody Kupper, director of student life, said Brav was scheduled at UTPB because of his diversified talent. "Because our student population likes a variety of music styles, we feel that Arne Brav will give a performance that everyone will enjoy," he said.

Kupper noted that Brav has entertained with such notables as Jim Croce, Judy Collins, Leon Redbone, Hand Williams, Jr., Grandpa Jones and bluegrass king, Bili Monroe.

A native of Ohio, Brav is on a nationwide college concert tour and has received very good reviews from colleges throughout the nation. Through his sharp, clear, professional sound, he has proved to his audiences that he is a master guitarist, and has the ability to make his audiences bounce with laughter to quiet reflection and back again.

The performance is free to UTPB students, faculty and staff.

Morgan to head Williamsburg meet

Glenda Morgan, field consultant for the museum and field services department of the Texas Historical Commission, has been named the new resident coordinator for the 24th Annual Seminar for Historical Administration in Williamsburg, Va. in May and June of 1982.

Morgan, whose office is housed in the UTPB dean's suite, is a UTPB alumnus who works with 115 county historical commissions and consults with 260 museums throughout West Texas. She is one of three museum consultants in the Texas Historical Commission who service county historical commissions and museums throughout the state.

Morgan noted the nationally acclaimed seminar in Williamsburg is designed to provide an intensive overview of historical administration for midmanagement level staff members employed by historical societies, museums, historic sites and parks, and restoration and preservation projects.

She will act as resident faculty member and chief liaison officer with sponsoring agencies.

The seminar is sponsored by the National Trust for Historic Preservation, Colonial Williamsburg, American Association for State and Local History, and the American Association of Museums.

The 15-member advisory council, which was approved at a recent meeting of The University of Texas System Board of Regents, is composed of business persons from throughout the area.

Dr. J. Edwin Becht, dean of the UTPB College of Management, said one of the major functions of the council is to communicate both to students and industry leaders the importance of business education, and to advise the College of Management on the requirements needed by local business and industry.

- ... both are c.p.a.'s
- ... both graduated from UTPB
- ... both received the B.B.A. degree
- ... both lived together at one time

No, it's not a far fetched love story, but the "account" of how a daughter followed in the steps of her father to get into the accounting business.

Alford Fox, class of '76, started taking classes at UTPB only to refresh his memory after having served in the U. S. Navy for 28 years. The retired naval officer had served as a carrier pilot during earlier years, but got the experience in budget work when working at the Pentagon. "At one point in my naval career I felt I had reached a threshold and could see the end of the line in the military. I decided to start another profession before I became too old," he said.

Fox left the navy in 1974 and after answering an advertisement in a newspaper while at the Pentagon, he moved to Odessa, and he has been here ever since.

Fox said Gene Nini, professor of accounting, was the person responsible for his going to school full time. "It was a good move to make; something I'll never regret," he stated. Fox now has his own CPA firm and couldn't be happier. "I do my job because I like it, not because I have to," he said.

Fox has developed an unique approach in dealing with his clients. Behind his desk is a large counter, and during the heavy tax season, he lines the taxes up in the order in which the clients bring them in. "When they ask when I can get to it I let them look at the work I have to do. They can decide for themselves if I can get to it, making them aware that no client has preference over another client," he stated.

When asked if dad may have had influence over his daughter, he said it was possible, since she worked for him before attending school.

The other side of the story, Beth Hanway, class of '79, received the Bachelor of Business Administration degree and passed the CPA examinations in May of 1980.

Like her father, Beth does taxation work, but works in a style all her own.

Rather than working in an outside office, Beth has an office in her home, and works in the afternoon doing work for West Texas Office Equipment Supply.

"The office in the home is convenient for me, but can have its drawbacks," she said.

According to Beth, she is too tempted to work in the evening hours. "My husband is real good at making sure we get out of the house so I won't be working all the time, however," she noted. On the other hand, she said, the office in the home gives her the opportunity to be a mother and wife at the same time, and gives her the freedom she needs.

"Hopefully, I can move the store's accounts into my home office soon, so I can handle everything at home. It can be a drawback to my clients to try to catch me at the office in the mornings," she explained.

Beth also has a close working relationship with her bosses at the West Texas Equipment Office Supply. Her husband is part owner in the firm, along with her father-in-law. "It works out very nicely, both for me and the store," she said.

When asked if her father had any influence on her becoming an accountant, she said that he did since her first plan was to become a veterinarian. "I guess I saw how much he enjoyed his work, and since I worked for him at times, I became interested and I made my shift to the business world," she said.

Unlike her dad, however, who started a career later in life, Beth has her own business at a much earlier age. "As a matter of fact, my youth may be a drawback in this business, because it is hard for some people to realize that someone in their twenties can be a qualified accountant," she noted.

She noted that there was certainly no competition between she and her dad. "In fact, if he gets too busy, he will refer the client to me and that helps because my business is still new," she noted.

The similarities may be there, and the differences are there also, but it is evident that both accountants have respect and confidence in each other, not only as father and daughter, but as professionals as well.

INTRODUCTORY TAX SEMINAR SET FOR OCT. 23

An introductory tax workshop for the small business is scheduled 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., Friday, October 23 in the UTPB Devonian Room.

Prof. Patricia Williams, instructor of accountancy and information systems, is conducting the day-long seminar. She said the two-part short course will include an orientation to business taxes and practical exercises in business taxes.

"The workshop is designed to provide only an introduction to business taxes and to give the new or prospective owner of a small business a brief introduction to the federal taxation responsibilities," she noted.

Other topics will be the tax advantages and disadvantages of sole proprietorships, partnerships, and corporations and what records the business should keep and how good records benefit business.

Morning sessions, beginning at 9 a.m., will include types of business organizations, business income tax returns, record keeping, the Internal Revenue Service and employment taxes.

Afternoon sessions, beginning at 1:30 p.m., will cover profit or loss from a business or profession, the employer's quarterly federal tax return, and the employer's annual federal unemployment tax return.

Cost of the workshop, including all materials and lunch, is $30. Persons wanting to register for the course or desiring further information, may contact Williams by calling 367-2162.

MINDPOWER week ends; ad

United Way goal is 100 per cent

One hundred per cent participation is the goal for organizers of UTPB's United Way Campaign, which is already underway and runs through October 22. Prof. David Hopkins, physical education, who is heading UTPB's campaign, said he and the other faculty and staff who will be monitoring the progress of the campaign did not set a dollar goal.

"We really didn't want to set a dollar goal on what people should give, but we are hoping to get 100% participation. We'd like everybody to give just what they think they can afford," he said. "We will be personally contacting each university employee within the next two weeks," he added.

Hopkins noted a big gauge showing the university's progress toward meeting its goal will be located by the elevator on the first floor and will be updated as employees climb closer to the 100% mark.

Contributions collected this year by the local United Way volunteers will be channelled to dozens of individual programs directed by 14 charitable and community organizations in Odessa.

Fundraisers hope to collect $795,000 in Odessa contributions during the drive.

United Way contributions will be made to The Boys Club, Girl and Boy Scouts, Childrens' Milk Fund, The Girls Club, Odessa Council on Alcoholism, Odessa Day Nursery and Phyllis Wheatley Day Nursery, Panhellenic Well Baby Clinic, Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center, Salvation Army, Red Cross, Southside and Westside YMCAs and community youth programs.

Activities continue

A crescendo of activities brought UTPB's Mindpower Week to a close Oct. 9; but the Mindpower celebration continues as exhibits remain open throughout October, and other events revealing the effect of higher education on society occur throughout the academic year and beyond.

Seminars and panel discussions sponsored by the College of Management brought a number of business and industry representatives together to share information on doing business abroad,, new oil technology, and business and the energy problem.

The stress management seminar by Prof. Joel Greenspoon, psychology, brought a capacity crowd. Some 40 girl scouts and other interested persons attended the nature hikes conducted by Prof. Edwin Kurtz, life science, and 70 community people came out for the education facility's physical performance testing session.

Students and area residents also were evident at the International Night sponsored by UTPB's foreign students, the art demonstrations and student recital, and the art reception and recorder concert, as well as the lectures on historical instruments, Texas fossils, women in higher education, drug misuse and abuse, and virtual memory systems, and the films on bi-culturalism.

High school students participated in the John Ireland teaching center tour and the mass communication open house and tour of UTPB's television studio. Some 15 area librarians were on hand for the library open house.

Petroleum Extension Service to relocate to UTPB campus

PETEX, the UT Austin Petroleum Extension Service located on the Odessa College campus for the past 25 years, will expand its training to include hands-on experience with outdoor facilities to be located on the UTPB campus.

Expansion of the continuing education program was made possible Friday when The University of Texas System Board of Regents approved the use of a 20-acre tract of land on the UTPB campus.

Dr. Curtis Kruse, director of PETEX, which is headquartered in Austin at the Balcones Research Center, said the Petroleum Extension Service will temporarily continue its classroom operations on the Odessa College campus, with students commuting to UTPB for outdoor hands-on training.

Eventually, he said, PETEX will move its entire operation to UTPB, subject to subsequent approval of the Regents and the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

Plans call for a new building to be placed on the UTPB site along Loop 338. The new construction, to be funded solely from earned income and contributions from the petroleum industry, would be built within approximately one year, but various pieces of outdoor equipment will be in use as early as January, 1982, Kruse said.

Kruse said 1,000-1,100 students will go through the Petroleum Extension Service in Odessa during a given year. "Just in the past year have we been requested to do more than the classroom and field trip training. We had to have a great deal of space to meet the demand for training," he added.

Programs to be taught include drilling, well servicing and workovers, and production operations, including production and processing of oil and gas.

Kruse explained that PETEX is not affiliated with UTPB but is run entirely under the auspices of UT Austin. Its programs differ from the petroleum technology program which Odessa College plans to institute in the near future.

"PETEX provides short courses and seminars based on the demands of the petroleum industry, and most of the students are sent by company management. We don't offer night courses and our students are not working toward a degree. About 95-98% of our students are already working in the field and take short courses at the expense of the company for which they work," he said.

"We work under the guidance of committees representing trade associations, and we move and react to the industry needs through industry and committee planning," he added.

October activities . . .

Four exhibits representing various media are on the UTPB and Odessa College campuses throughout October as part of the University's Mindpower observance.

Lubbock sculptor Sara Waters, assistant professor of art at Texas Tech University whose works have been exhibited throughout the United States, is featured in sculpture exhibition, located in the third-floor gallery.

Waters' works have been exhibited in 15 states including many juried shows. In 1981, her sculptures have been shown at the "Fourth Annual Women's Graphic Art Competition" in Los Gatos, Calif.; "Clay Az Art IV" at Northern Arizona University Gallery, Flagstaff, Ariz.; "Third Texas Sculpture Symposium" at Southwest Texas State University; "Fifth National Drawing Exhibition," Brainert Art Gallery, State University College, Potsdam, N.Y.; "Paper in Particular," National Exhibition of Works on Paper," Columbia University, Columbia, Mo; and "Five Clay Instructors," Architecture Gallery, Texas Tech University. She has been exhibiting since 1974.

"The Last Picture Show," the title of a well-known novel and contemporary movie by Texas author Larry McMurtry,

Matthews to address local ACS chapter

Chemical evolution will be the topic of a public lecture featuring Dr. Clifford N. Matthews, professor of chemistry at The University of Illinois at Chicago Circle at 7 p.m. Oct. 20 in The University of Texas at the Permian Basin Devonian Room.

Co-sponsored by the UTPB student chapter of the American Chemical Society, the lecture is free and open to the public.

Matthews, ascribes to the concept of universal evolution, not only in his current research activities but also in his teaching. In addition to teaching a graduate course in chemical evolution, he is the coordinator of an interdisciplinary course in natural science for nonscience majors that uses the theme of evolution in its broadest sense to unify basic concepts of physics, geology, chemistry and biology.

A native of Hong Kong, Clifford graduated from the University of London before coming to the United States and taking his Ph.D. from Yale in 1955. He worked in various research positions with industry until he joined the faculty at the University of Illinois in 1969.

will be the subject of a special exhibit in the library through Oct. 31.

Robert Turner, UTPB public services librarian, said the exhibit is limited to manuscripts and documents relating to "The Last Picture Show," both as a novel and screenplay, but the library holds a collection of McMurtry's papers including manuscripts of other novels and screenplays, correspondence and essays.

Rodeo nostalgia runs rampant as bronc riders, calf ropers, clowns and other rodeo heroes are captured in a special photographic exhibit currently on display in the library.

The exhibit, which explores the West Texas world of rodeos from 1939-1945, was compiled by UTPB history students from a collection of negatives taken by the late John A. Stryker, is part of the UTPB library's special collections. Stryker was a long-time professional photographer from Fort Worth.

Dr. Roger Olién, chairman of history at UTPB, said students went through more than 2400 negatives in the collection and made 1,000 contact prints before choosing the photographs to be included in the exhibit.

The UTPB Travelling Student Art Show is on exhibit in Odessa College's Instructional Building through Oct. 31.

Prof. Pamela Price, noted art students at all levels have contributed to the show. Watercolors, drawings, lithographs, pastels and woodcuts are among the media represented by students. All items on display were completed within the past year.

Price said the show helps students learn to promote their own work and gives the junior colleges and area communities a sample of the work being done at UTPB.

All exhibits are free and open to the public. Library hours are 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Saturday. Gallery hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday -Friday. OC's instructional building is open Monday-Saturday.

MASC recipients named for fall

Four UTPB students are among the recipients of scholarships from the Mexican-American Scholarship Committee (MASC) for the fall 1981 semester.

Vickie Gomez, associate director of admissions and a member of the MASC board of directors, said the UTPB students are among 13 scholarship recipients at UTPB and Odessa College.

Holding scholarships at UTPB are Antonio Gonzales in psychology, Hortensia Ramirez in literature, Delma Valenzuela in accounting and Dora Valenzuela in Spanish.

Gomez noted that MASC, founded in 1973 by local businessman, Ben Mancha, raises funds to benefit Mexican-American students from the Permian Basin who choose to attend college or university classes in Odessa.

Permian Consort to play Oct. 22-23

UTPB's Permian Consort will present its first concert of the current academic year in Midland and Odessa Oct. 22-23.

The two performances of early music are scheduled at 8 p.m., Oct. 22 in the Allison Fine Arts Center at Midland College and at 8 p.m., October 23 in the Jack Rogers auditorium at Odessa College.

Prof. Craig Lister, music faculty member and director of Permian Consort, said the program features 17th and 18th century symphonies and concertos performed with original instrumentation.

Among the works to be included in the concert is Bach's "Orchestral Suite in B Minor," the earliest known example of a flute concerto. Soloist will be Julie Osborn, music senior at UTPB.

Pumpkin carving competition on tap

The annual Pumpkin Carving Contest sponsored by the UTPB Art Association is scheduled Oct. 27 in the student lounge.

Carving begins at noon and continues throughout the day, with judging scheduled at 3 p.m.

The pumpkins will be judged on such criteria as the funniest, scariest, and the most original.

Prizes will be awarded for the best of show, second and third place. The prizes consist of planters and a facial from Elegante, aerobic classes from Heartbeat Aerobics and miscellaneous prizes from Strike It Rich.

After the judging, the carved pumpkins may be bought for $1, the rest will go to hospitals and rest homes in the area.

The pumpkins will be donated by Gibson's Discount Center. The art association will also have a bake sale going on during the contest.

Proceeds made from the pumpkin carving contest and bake sale will help the art association plan its upcoming activities.

The contest is free and open to the public.

'Twelfth Night' auditions slated

Plans are being made by the faculty and student theatre students to participate in the annual Spring Shakespeare Festival, at the Globe Theatre. Prof. Donna Lee Crabtree, director of the Shakespearian play, Twelfth Night, said the parts will be cast from UTPB students and Permian Basin community actors.

"Although casting preference will be given to students registered for the Theatre 361 during the Spring semester, all interested actors are encouraged to audition," she said. Auditions will be private; open, public auditions will not be held, she added.

She noted that Twelfth Night rehearsals are scheduled 7-10 p.m., weekdays, during January and February, with the final performance scheduled during the second weekend in March. Crabtree noted that line work will begin in early November and the cast will, therefore, be announced by the end of October. Several roles remain uncast with many non-speaking roles also available for men and women.

All interested actors are encouraged to contact Crabtree at 367-2351 or 368-0694.

Horror movie calling all stars

Release your hostilities Oct. 30-31 as the student life office brings its exclusive showing of "Rocky Horror Picture Show" at 8 p.m. in the student lounge.

Woody Kupper, director of student life, said the audience participation movie has gained popularity since its introduction several years ago.

"Come out and have a good time. This is one movie where you can be a star. We will be giving prizes to the best movie look-alike costume," he said.

The event is free and open to the public.

'Last Picture Show' comes to campus

"The Last Picture Show," the modern classic movie starring Timothy Bottoms and Cloris Leachman, will be shown at 7 p.m., Oct. 16 and at 2 p.m., and 7 p.m., Oct. 17 in the student lounge cinema area.

Co-sponsored by the Office of Student Life and the Learning Resource Center, the film is brought as part of UTPB's Mindpower observance. An exhibit of the papers of Larry McMurtry, the author of "The Last Picture Show," is on exhibit this month in the library. The movie and exhibit are free and open to the public.

Divorce coping to be discussed

"Divorce Adjustment: Coping with a New Lifestyle" will be the topic of an eight-week continuing education class offered on the UTPB campus, beginning Oct. 22.

Peggy O'Neal, coordinator of the course, said the eight-week sessions will be a series of discussions dealing with problems encountered during and after divorce.

Such things as learning to cope with new situations, stages of divorce recovery, and ways of dealing with the "single-again" life will be covered.

Guest speakers will also deal with topics such as stress, anger, practical adjustment, legal aspects, cope rental adjustment, personal development and social aspects of the divorce, before and after.

O'Neal noted that those who go through a divorce should have some recourse to take or some place to go for help.

"As a daughter of an alcoholic and Alanon parents whose life work is counseling with people problems, my recourse when faced with divorce was to seek help with those who had been through a similar experience," she noted.

O'Neal added that divorce adjustment counselling made her experience easier than it might have been without the knowledge she gained in group sessions.

Classes will meet on Thursday nights beginning Oct. 22, 7-9:30 p.m. in the UTPB Gym 201. Fee for the class is $15.

PETEX moves to UTPB campus

PETEX is part of the UT Austin division of continuing education. Established in 1944, it has had operations at OC since 1955. It has full-service training capabilities, conducts technology schools and in-house training programs, and distributes training manuals, slides, tapes and films. The home office is at UT Austin's Balcones Research Center. Other training centers are located in Houston and Kilgore.

Regents also accepted $35,000 in gifts for scholarships and approved a series of grants and contracts.

A $25,000 gift from Mr. J. H. Creekmore on behalf of the Houston Endowment, Inc., is a one-year renewal of the Jesse H. Jones Work Scholarships and the Mary Gibbs Jones Work Scholarships for upper-level studies. Another $10,000 gift from the Davidson Family Charitable Foundation provides additional funds to the Permian Basin Scholarship Fund.

Several contracts renewed previous agreements between UTPB and other agencies.

An agreement between High Sky Girl's Ranch and the university provides a UTPB mobile classroom to High Sky Girl's Ranch. In return, UTPB students receive counseling internships at the ranch.

Also on the docket was an agreement whereby Ector County Independent School District leases classroom space on campus for early childhood education. ECISD pays $3,400 for the use of the classrooms for the academic year.

A contract between UTPB and the Texas Education Agency funds a training project for bilingual teachers in the university's summer laboratory school in the amount of $5,325.

Another $3,000 contract provides management counseling and technical assistance for small businesses through the UTPB College of Management.

Phi Theta Kappa organizes, appoints executive committee

The Executive Committee for Phi Theta Kappa met last Thursday, to establish the procedures and format in applying for a charter as an Alumni Chapter to Phi Theta Kappa. The Committee is made up of UTPB students who were members of PHI THETA KAPPA at the junior college level. These students responded to the publicized organizational meeting sponsored by the office of student life.

The handbook for chartering as an alumni chapter directs the university students to form an executive committee to accomplish 6 steps toward being chartered by the national office. These six steps are: 1. selecting a facu-lity sponsor/advisor; 2. prepare a constitution; 3. alert prospective members; 4. obtain official recognition as a student organization at UTPB; 5. submit a petition for chartering to the national office; and 6. plan the installation ceremony.

Members of the Executive Committee are: Jack Winburn, Gary Wynne, Theresa McMahan, and Laurie Newton transfers from Odessa College; Susan Wynne from Weatherford Jr. College; Niles Foster, transfer from Midland College; Cynthia Adams from Victoria College; and Carrie Dunham, Brenda Claxton, Margaret Smith, Ruby Pike, and Charles Hamner from Howard College.
