Foreword

My interest in First Street Cemetery began in the early 1990s when I located the grave marker for the Rev. William McKendree Lambdin which had been reported as missing. I was later asked to apply for and obtain an Official Texas Historical Marker for this minister as a project of the Commission on Archives and History of the Central Texas Conference of The United Methodist Church.

My latest interest in this cemetery began when reading that human bones were being found during the construction of the Texas Rangers' Company F Headquarters building in the campground of Fort Fisher Park. I wondered why bones were being found on the land which for most of my life was a scenic campground. Then a friend told me of the existence of an 1869 map of Waco which I might find of interest. It was when I viewed this map and saw the distinct boundaries of the City, Masonic, and Odd Fellows' cemeteries which comprise First Street Cemetery that I realized that what I knew as the campground of Fort Fisher Park was actually part of this historic cemetery. This observation led to my research with Dr. John Griggs into the history of the cemetery and notable persons who were buried there.

I am indebted to the authors and compilers of the many books and articles that were used to compose these brief sketches. I am sure that some errors exist in these sketches since different sources would sometimes have variations in the spelling of names and the dates of birth and death. I am also indebted to the numerous descendants who provided information about their relatives at the cemetery. Until I began this research, I did not know that some of my Selman and Davis relatives were also buried at the cemetery.

Appreciation is expressed to Mrs. J. L. Staton, Sr. and Mrs. Thos. R. Meredith who compiled the earliest known survey of First Street Cemetery in 1962.

Appreciation is also expressed to Dr. John Griggs, Melvin Dotson, and Willard E. Brown, III for their help and encouragement during this very interesting and controversial research project, and to Andrea Anderson for her assistance with placing these sketches on the computer.

Mayor's Message
Concerning
First Street Cemetery

“First street cemetery is owned by the city; the people who founded the city are buried there; it is in wretched condition, and I believe the city should put it in good condition and maintain it. We owe that much to the people who started the town of Waco.”

- Mayor J.H. Mackey
