OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF TEXAS
AUSTIN

Gerald C. Mann
ATTORNEY GENERAL

Honorable Stanley Timmins
County Attorney
Harrison County
Marshall, Texas

Dear Mr. Timmins:

Opinion No. 9-618

Re: Does a commissioners' court have authority to pay an attorney on a quantum meruit basis for services rendered in the collection of delinquent taxes or in any other manner than that set out in Articles 7235a, Sections 1 and 2?

Your request for an opinion on the above captioned question has been received and carefully considered. Your brief and citation of authorities, included in your letter, have been of assistance to this department in the investigation on the subject, for which we express our appreciation.

You advise that on August 29, 1932, the Commissioners' Court of Harrison County made a "purported contract" with Mr. R. B. Shepherd, a practicing lawyer, to file pleas of intervention on behalf of the county and state in pending cases, which had been filed by the City of Marshall against various property owners to collect delinquent taxes, and that the state and county had been pleadied in these suits. A photocopy of said instrument accompanies your letter, from which we quote material parts as follows:

WHEREAS, the Commissioners Court of Harrison County, Texas, joined by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of State of Texas does it necesnary and expedient to contract with some competent attorney at law to intervene and enforce the collection of delinquent state and county taxes due against the defendant taxpayers within said city for a per cent of said taxes, penalties and interest actually collected and paid to the Collector of Taxes, as provided in Chapter 21, Acts of the Third Called Session of the Thirty-eighth Legislature Art. V255, Revised Civil Statutes, 1925; Chapter 2, Acts Fourth Called Session of the Forty-first Legislature; Art. V255, Vermont's Annotated Civil Statutes; and Chapter 220, Acts of the Forty-second Legislature, Art. V255, Vermont's Annotated Civil Statutes; Acts of the Forty-fifth Legislature, Regular Session, Senate Bill 477, Art. V255, Vermont's Annotated Statutes, 1925; etc.

"NOW, THEREFORE, THIS CONTRACT made and entered into by and between the County of Harrison, Texas, a body politic and corporate, acting herein, by and through its Commissioners' Court, joined by the Comptroller of Public Accounts of the State of Texas, hereinafter styled First Party, and A. E. Shepherd, a practicing attorney of the County of Harrison, State of Texas, hereinafter styled Second Party;

"WITNESS;

"First Party agrees in writing, to employ, and does hereby employ, Second Party to intervene, prosecute and negotiate for speedy enforcement of the collection of the delinquent state and county ad valorem taxes, penalty, interest and costs against the property, or any part thereof, said upon by the City of Marshall, a corporation, as the same appear upon the tax rolls and delinquent tax rolls and collectible by the county tax collector under the provisions of Article 7254 and 7257 R. S. 1925 and shown to be delinquent upon the delinquent tax records of said county from 1925 to the date of termination of this contract, one year from the date hereof.

III

First Party agrees to pay to Second Party as compensation for services required hereunder, fifteen (15%) per cent of the amount collected of all delinquent taxes, penalty, interest and fine costs of the years sued upon from time to time and actually collected by the tax collector of taxes pursuant to said suits or interventions made as follows: ten (10%) per cent of which amount shall be from the delinquent taxpayer as costs pursuant to Section 6, Article 7645B Revised Civil Statutes of 1923 as passed by the Forty-fifth Legislature, Regular Session and collected from the taxpayer; and five (5%) per cent to be paid by First Party out of taxes, penalty, and interest collected from defendants in said intervention suits, said compensation to be payable monthly as earned upon statements to the Commissioners' Court from the Assessor and Collector of Taxes of said county on the second Monday of each month with first report on September 1st, 1928 for collections during July and August, 1928, said reports to be available as soon after the first of each month as possible.

This instrument was not "joined in" by the Comptroller, as contemplated by its terms, nor was it approved by the Comptroller and the Attorney General, as required by the present statute.

It further appears from your statement that Mr. Shepard did in fact file 108 pleas of intervention in the tax suits; that approximately $3000.00 was collected and paid to the Assessor and Collector of Taxes, and that the attorney was paid during the year 1928 the sum of $400.00 on account of the services so performed by him.

You further state in substance that inasmuch as the Attorney General on February 11, 1929, held such instrument to be void and ineffective as a contract, Mr. Shepard had proceeded no further thereunder, but that he had presented a claim to the Commissioners' Court of Harrison County for $1050.00, less the $400.00 already paid to him, basing the claim upon a quantum meruit as for the reasonable value of the services as performed by him to the county.

The opinion of the Attorney General was based upon the plain words of the statute hereinafter quoted and several decisions of the Supreme Court and the Courts of Civil Appeals, which had declared in effect that any agreement entered into between the Commissioners' Court and an attorney, which had to do with the collection of delinquent taxes, whether by suit or otherwise, is absolutely void, unless it is approved as to substance and form both by the State Comptroller and the Attorney General. Some of the cases so holding are:

1. Ewing-Warron Pub. Co. v. Hutchinson Co., 48 S. W. 351, (writ of error refused, and which was rendered February 2, 1932);

2. Easterwood v. Henderson Co. (Com. of App.), 68 S. W. (2) 65, (rendered June 23, 1933);

3. Sylvan Sanders Co. v. Secry Co., 77 S. W. (2) 709 (rendered December 7, 1934);

The pertinent statutes bearing upon this question are Article 7332a, Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes, tit 41:

"No contract shall be made or entered into by the Commissioners' Court in connection with the collection of delinquent taxes where the compensation under such contract is more than fifteen per cent of the amount collected. Said contract must be approved by both the Comptroller and the Attorney General of the State of Texas, both as to substance and form. Provided however the County or District Attorney shall not receive any compensation for any services he may render in connection with the performance of the contract or the taxes collected thereunder.

"Any contract made in violation of this Act shall be void."
Article 3843, Sec. 6, Vernon's Annotated Texas Civil Statutes provides:

"All court costs, including costs of serving process, in any suit hereafter brought by or in behalf of any taxing units for delinquent taxes in which suits all other taxing units having a delinquent tax claim against such property or any part thereof, have been implicated, together with all expenses of foreclosure sale and such reasonable attorney's fees as may be incurred by the interpleaded or intervening taxing units, not exceeding ten per cent (10%) of the amount sued for, such attorney's fees to be subject to the approval of the court together with such reasonable expenses as the taxing units may in-sue in procuring data and information as to the name, identity and location of necessary parties and in procuring necessary legal descriptions of the property, shall be chargeable as court costs."

In consideration of the foregoing statutes and the cited cases, it is not believed that the opinion of the Attorney General had the effect to confer any right in Mr.
Shepard to proceed against the county on an implied contract. The Attorney General's ruling did not kill this instrument, nor did it cripple its supposed effectiveness.
Lacking the approval of the Comptroller and the Attorney General as to its substance and form, such instrument was a tortious document, which never had any life nor possessed any more validity than if it had been a blank sheet of paper.

The provisions of the statutes above quoted make clear two things, which are: (1) the Commissioners Court of Harrison County was powerless by and of itself to make a contract with Mr. Shepard with respect to filing pleas of intervention in delinquent tax suits, or concerning any other matters having to do with collection of delinquent taxes; and (2) had the instrument in question been executed so as to make it a contract, the only method of payment provided for the services that might have been rendered thereunder is that stated in and limited by the aforesaid statutes.

In the study of this question we have read and considered such cases as Bluder v. City of San Antonio
(Com. of App.) 2 S. W. (2) 843; Harrison Co. v. Neville, 34 S. W. (2) 824; Southwestern Lloyds v. City of Wheeler (Com. of App.) 109 S. W. (2) 782; Vest Audit Co. v. Yount-ville Co. (Com. of App.) 26 S. W. (2) 904, and other cases of similar import.

In all these cases it was held that suits might be maintained and recoveries could be had against counties or municipalities upon implied contracts for the reasonable value of goods furnished or services rendered, that is, upon a quantum meruit, notwithstanding the contracts which had been entered into between the counties or municipalities and the other contracting party or parties were void and unenforceable. An examination of these cases, however, will disclose that in each instance the contracts that were involved in those cases were such as a county or municipality acting as a corporate entity could have made.

Furthermore, in none of these cases was it necessary for the State to be a party to the contracts, either in its own name or by some authorized departmental agency; nor did any of them have anything to do with matters about which the State was directly concerned.

We now refer to and will briefly discuss a few of the authorities which distinguish such a case as the instant one from the Cluder and other similar cases. We direct special attention to the case of Num-Vanren Pub.
Co. v. Hutchinson County, supra. In that case the county sued to recover from the Publishing Company a sum which had therefore been paid to the Company by an ordinary county warrant on account of its having published citations in delinquent tax suits. The county in its petition alleged that the Publishing Company was advised before the warrant was issued to it that the county was not liable thereon, and that all of the acts of the county's officers pertaining to the approval and allowance of same were illegal and void. The grounds of invalidity of such warrant are disclosed by Article 7342, R. C. S., 1925, which relates to suits for delinquent taxes against unknown and non-resident owners and which provides for fees to be allowed newspapers for making public publication of citations in such cases, and which further provides that such publication fees shall be taxed as costs in the pending case. The court held that the Legislature had given the Commissioners' Court no authority to pay for the publication of such citations "out of funds of the county derived from any other source than as shown in the said statute." The record in that case showed that the Publishing Company had no contract with the Commissioners' Court, unless the approval and payment of its claim by the county constituted a valid contract by implication. In its opinion the court said:

"'County commissioners' courts have no power or authority, except such as is conferred upon them by the Constitution or statutes of the state.' Baldwin v. Travis County, 40 Tex.Civ. App. 140, 28 S.W. 480, 484. Also Commissioners' Court of Madison County et al. v. Wallace et al., 119 Tex. 279, 16 S.W. (2d) 355.

"The rule is apparently settled in Texas that if a county receives the benefit of a contract which it had the power to make but which was not legally entered into, it may be compelled to pay for what it has received, because in such cases the law implies a contract. Elador v. City of San Antonio (Tex.Com.App.) 2 S.W. (2d) 541; West Audit Co. v. Yoakum County (Tex.Com.App.) 23 S.W. (2d) 404.

"However, 'the county may not be held liable upon an implied contract or quantum meruit unless the commissioners' court was authorized to make the contract sought to be implied, nor is the county estopped to set up as a defense the want of authority in making the contract. The other party to the agreement is not in the situation of one who has acted innocently or without knowledge of the circumstances. One who deals with the county is charged with notice of the regulations; and a custom which ignores the law cannot be invoked for the purpose of validating a transaction which is otherwise invalid.'"

The opinion in the Hutchinson County case cited with approval the case of Baldwin v. Travis County, 28 S.W. 480, which had announced the law on a similar state of facts, and in which the court said:
"A county cannot be held liable in an action upon an implied contract of quantum meruit, unless the Commissioners' Court was authorized to make the contract sought to be implied or on which the quantum meruit is based. City of San Antonio v. French, 30 Tex. 578, 1 S.W. 440, 29 Am. St. Rep. 922; Fann v. City of Laredo (Tex.Civ.App.) 23 S.W. 638; Peck v. City of Hempstead (Tex.Civ.App.) 65 S.W. 653; 1 Dillon on Municipal Corporations, Sections 459-460."

In the case of San Antonio v. French, cited in the Travis County case, the Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Gaines, in a few well considered words, clearly stated on what state of facts a municipality may become liable upon an implied contract, and then announced the law, which we here follow. The court said:

"It may be that when a municipal corporation has received the benefit of a contract, which it had the power to make, but which was not legally entered into, it may be compelled to do justice, and to pay the consideration, or at least to pay for what it has received. In such cases it is said that the law will imply a contract. But we think it is contrary to sound principles to imply a contract in any other case."

In the case of Easterwood v. Henderson County, supra, the court said:

"The power to provide for the collection of delinquent taxes, and prescribe the compensation to be paid for services rendered in that respect, resides exclusively in the legislature. Except as given by statute, a commissioners' court is powerless to contract in the respects mentioned. As already pointed out the authority of the commissioners' court to contract with respect to the collection of delinquent taxes proceeds from the Legislature, and is subject to such limitations as the Legislature sees fit to prescribe. Furthermore, the provisions of the 1931 Act do not purport to authorize the imposition of any liability against the county except in conjunction with the liability against the State. (All emphasis hereinafter ours).

These decisions clearly announce the law and the reasons therefor and any further comment thereon would be superfluous.

It follows from what has been said that it is the opinion of the Attorney General that the Commissioners' Court does not have the authority to pay an attorney on a quantum meruit basis for services rendered in the collection of delinquent taxes, and that such services when and if rendered in pursuance to a contract that has been legally entered into can only be compensated for in the manner set forth in Article 7531a, and other related statutes which have been referred to in this opinion.

Yours very truly
