Now comes O. J. Howland, administrator of said estate, and makes his final report of his administration of said estate, and respectfully shows to the court that no funds and no monies belonging to said estate came into his hands, and no property save and except certain saloon and bar fixtures and the stock of whiskeys described in the inventory; that said stock of whiskeys and bar fixtures and furniture were claimed by Flippen, Adoue & Lobitt and Joe Mencer under a mortgage executed thereupon by Joseph Boylosh in his lifetime; that the right of said property was tried and determined as between said parties and this administrator and decided in favor of this administrator; that thereafter this administrator procured an order of sale of said property and a sale of same was had, reported to and approved and confirmed by this court; that the proceeds of said property were paid into the hands of W. M. C. Hill, then county clerk of the county court of Dallas county, Texas; that on the application of Carrie Boylosh, the widow of Joseph Boylosh, the court made an allowance to her of Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) in lieu of the homestead, and the further sum of $346. (three hundred and forty-six dollars) in lieu of personalty as being exempt to her under the law; that thereafter upon the application of said Carrie Boylosh, the county court of Dallas county on the 16th day of May, 1884, by a decree of said court, ordered said money, same being $1,000.00 to be paid over to the administrator or widow of said deceased, viz: Carrie Boylosh; that in accordance with and in pursuance of said order, on May 16, 1884, W. M. C. Hill, then clerk of the county court of Dallas county, paid over to said Carrie Boylosh the sum of $1,000.00 less the sum of $39.85 court costs, and took the receipt of said Carrie Boylosh
