GUIDE TO USING THE MAP

This map furnishes information about the Trail locations, including detailed instructions on how to reach each site. An illustrated highway map shows the designated sites. Each site is marked with a symbol signifying the following:

- Circle: The site is open daily, and developed camping is available.
- Triangle: The site is open for day use only.
- Square: Call ahead, access to the site is restricted; visitation may be arranged by contacting the managing entity at the website and telephone number provided.

NOTE: If the symbol is outlined in black, an entrance fee or donation may be required (subject to change).

In addition, each symbol is colored to distinguish the segment or loop to which the site belongs. Each site has been assigned to one of the designated loops, organized to help travelers plan their trips.

Descriptions of the sites are on the back of the map, and include directions to each location, examples of wildlife that can be seen, and contacts for additional information. The text, like the map, is organized by loops. A list of regional contacts (chambers of commerce, convention and visitors bureaus) begins each section. Information about food, lodging, and local points of interest may be obtained from these organizations.

To aid travelers, each site is marked with a brown sign illustrated with the familiar Scaled Quail logo, as well as a unique site number that corresponds with the map. Just look for the logo sign to verify that you've reached your location.

TPWD may be contacted about state parks and wildlife management areas (see website and telephone numbers below). Texas Mountain Trail Region and Texas Pecos Trail Region may be contacted for information about cultural sites within their regions (see websites and telephone numbers below). Information about traveling Texas highways may be requested from TxDOT (www.dot.state.tx.us).
